

Towards an equitable tomorrow

“ We are at the cusp of a monumental change. The moment has come for us to look up, imagine and reimagine the world that we want our future generations to usher in.

Sangita Jindal
Chairperson, JSW Foundation

Dear Stakeholders,

Year after year, we continue to experience more extreme and erratic weather patterns. The last few months have seared themselves in our minds as some of the hottest in recorded history. Our summers are getting hotter and longer. Our rainfall is getting less predictable—more extreme in certain places, less so in others. Yet, hope floats in all of us.

At JSW Foundation, we believe we can turn the tide of climate change, starting by acknowledging that we are one world—an interconnected one—where through cooperation, communication, and innovation, we can grow stronger together.

According to estimates, innovation and the use of new knowledge account for more than 80% of economic development. JSW is a part of that ecosystem, enabling social innovations of several kinds. In line with the Hon'ble Prime Minister's goal of 'Sabka Saath, Sabka Vikas, Sabka Vishwas', we act on our resources' full force, calling it 'Sabka Prayas', which will aid India's development.

Today, more and more Indians are accepting of transformative ideas and refusing to buckle down to daunting social and environmental problems. Technology and innovations are helping us bring forth solutions that have never been dreamed of or were not previously conceivable. Over time, we have seen innovations in health, climate change, nutrition, and natural resource management, all painting new worlds with their solutions. The fundamental goal of these innovations is the same—bringing simple, effective, and creative solutions to complex problems local communities face.

At JSW Foundation, we have aligned our vision to that of the nation's development vision for 2050. The Foundation's efforts are aimed at making communities self-resilient and independent so that they can withstand any volatility. On this momentous growth path of the nation, the onus is on India Inc. to meet this moment with equal amounts of rigour, passion, and structure. This moment implores the private sector to acknowledge how intricately our roots are tied together. We must make it our collective prerogative to walk on this path, along with the public sector.

With that spirit, we invite all of you to join hands with us to transform the nation into a force to be reckoned with.

Sangita Jindal
Chairperson, JSW Foundation